

Neutral vs. Hostile

The legal stance
of our Constitution
towards religion
is neutral,
not hostile.

Conversely,
the living stance
of religion
towards our society
is neither neutral
nor hostile,
but helpful
and favorable.

When disaster strikes,
people look to
religious institutions,
because they are
far from neutral
and the opposite of hostile.

Religion fosters
good citizenship
by not being neutral
to civic education
nor hostile to beneficial legislation.

Secular government has departments of
health, education,
and welfare—
so does religion!

It is sad, therefore,
and injurious
to our citizens,
when secular neutrality degenerates into
religious hostility.
